

I believe that extending the CALEA law to apply to the internet and VoIP is a shocking invasion of our privacy, as much more than communication goes over the internet. Plus, who knows what creativity will be stifled by mandating that Broadband carriers make their networks compatible with this act?